Six Basic Principles

The federal and state special education laws and the rights of parents and students in special education are grounded upon six basic principles.

11

Slide 12

The Six Principles

1. Parent and Student Participation
2. Free and Appropriate Public Education (FAPE)
3. Appropriate Evaluation
4. Individualized Education Program (IEP)
5. Least Restrictive Environment (LRE)
6. Procedural Safeguards

12

Parent's Rights in Special Education Note-taker

Slide 13

Principle #1 - Parent and Student Participation

- Parents have the right to participate in all special education planning and decision-making activities.
- Students are the focus of special education and, as they grow older, students are expected to participate in planning for their own future as much as possible.
- It is the obligation of the school district to make strong efforts, in multiple ways, to ensure parental and student participation.

13

Slide 14

Specific participation rights:

- School districts must make multiple efforts to facilitate parental attendance at Team meetings. If parents cannot attend, schools must seek parent input through other means.
- Students at age 14, or younger if appropriate, are entitled to participate in all Team meetings.
- Students at age 18 are adults under Massachusetts' law and assume all the rights formerly held by their parents for participation and decision-making.

14

Slide 15

District Parent Advisory Council

- ▲ Advising the district on matters pertaining to the education and safety of students with disabilities.
- ▲ Meeting regularly with school officials to participate in the planning, development, and evaluation of the school district's special education programs.
- ▲ Conducting, with the district, the annual workshop on the rights of students and parents under special education law. (This workshop)

The PAC is entitled to receive assistance from the district without charge, upon reasonable notice, and subject to the availability of staff and resources.

Parent's Rights in Special Education Note-taker

Slide 22

Principle #4 - Individualized Education Program (IEP)

- Written information on the parent's concerns and the student's skills.
- A written explanation of how the disability affects the student's ability to learn and to demonstrate his or her learning.
- An identification of specific, measurable goals which can be reached in a year's time.
- A listing of the services to be provided to the student.

22

Slide 23

Purpose of the IEP

The IEP's purpose is to outline:

- What will be done to assist the student to make effective progress in the general curriculum and in the life of the school.
- How the student will participate in state and local assessment. State assessment in Massachusetts means the MCAS.
- The goals the student is expected to reach by the end of the IEP period.

23

Slide 24

Rights Associated with the IEP

- Before the school can begin IEP services, the school must obtain the parent's consent.
- The parent has the right to accept or reject the proposed IEP in part or in full.
- The completed IEP is signed by both the school district and the parent and serves as a contract between the school and the parent.
- The parents can withdraw their consent at any time in relation to any service or program.

24

Parent's Rights in Special Education Note-taker

Slide 25

Principle #5 - Least Restrictive Environment (LRE)

LRE means that to the maximum extent appropriate, students with disabilities have the right to be educated in the general education environment & in the classroom they would have attended if they did not have disabilities.

LRE means the student cannot be removed from the general education classroom solely because of needed curriculum modifications.

LRE means that removal from the general education program occurs only if the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in general education classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be satisfactorily achieved.

25

Slide 26

Some Types of Educational Placements

- In the public school building: the general education classroom, a resource room, or a substantially separate classroom
- Outside of the public school building: a separate day school or a separate residential school
- For young children (aged 3-5): a home-based or center-based early childhood program

26

Slide 27

Students have the right to receive special education services even when they are unable to attend school.

Sometimes students are unable to attend public schools for non-educational reasons. Students may be:

- In a hospital,
- At home
- Or in an institutional setting run by a state agency.
