

Indicators of school quality or student success

The Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA) requires states to include at least one additional indicator of school quality or student success in its accountability and assistance system, other than student assessment results, English language proficiency levels and graduation rates. The law states that this could include such measures as student engagement, educator engagement, access to and completion of advanced coursework, postsecondary readiness, or school climate and safety. The following list includes indicators suggested by external stakeholders and ESE staff during the initial phase of gathering feedback on Massachusetts' accountability and assistance system.
